

Help troops who lost everything

A deadly attack by Taliban insurgents against U.S. troops in the rugged Nuristan region of Afghanistan took the lives of eight Americans and forced the remaining forces to destroy their outpost, Camp Keating. By doing so, they destroyed all of their personal belongings, aside from the clothes on their backs.

The American Legion – through its Burn Pit blog site – has established the COP Keating Relief Fund to help these soldiers. Tax-deductible contributions are now being accepted to help replace their personal belongings – like running shoes, socks, iPods, video game systems, DVD players and other items to help them pass the time far from home, in a battle zone.
