“Just because a Washington flow chart structures the Coast Guard under Homeland Security does not mean they should not be paid. Whether they are performing rescues during a hurricane or stopping drug traffickers at sea, members of the Coast Guard regularly perform heroic and lifesaving tasks on our behalf. They should not have to worry about bills and living expenses just because Congress and the White House cannot agree on a budget.”

- American Legion National Commander Brett Reistad in response to the federal government shutdown and its impact on U.S. Coast Guard personnel; The American Legion made available expedited Temporary Financial Assistance grant applications for minor children of Coast Guard members who are in need during the shutdown.

“I am an active-duty Coast Guard member. I just want to say thank you to The American Legion for offering assistance to Coast Guard members and their families during this time of uncertainty.”

Number of times The American Legion presented testimony before Congress during the newly completed 115th Session. Among many legislative priorities of The American Legion that became law in the session were: the Veterans Affairs Accountability and Whistleblower Protection Act of 2017; the Veterans Affairs Appeals and Modernization Act of 2017 (signed by President Trump on the stage of the 99th American Legion National Convention in Reno, Nev.); the VA MISSION Act; the Harry W. Colmery Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2017 (the “Forever GI Bill”); an act authorizing the U.S. Mint to strike a 2019 commemorative coin set in honor of the Legion’s centennial; improvements to the Choice Act for VA health care; and advances in the Electronic Health Record system to make VA and DoD medical records more interoperable.
100 Years Ago in the Legion

A century ago this month, four line officers of the American Expeditionary Forces – Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.; Lt. Col. George A. White; Col. William Donovan; and Lt. Col. Eric Fisher Wood – met in Paris to discuss the recent passing of former President Theodore Roosevelt, their imminent mustering out of service, the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia and what might happen at home when nearly 2 million newly discharged combat veterans, many disabled and shell-shocked, returned to civilian lives.

Roosevelt, Jr., had discussed the idea of a veterans organization among troops still in Europe, whose morale was low as they awaited passage home. By this time, a U.S. group called Comrades in Service had originated in Europe, led by American Expeditionary Forces Chief Chaplain Charles Brent, but it didn’t get much traction among the troops, who were frequently absent without leave and occasionally causing mischief while awaiting orders to ship out.

At this time, just two months after the armistice, the U.S. Public Health Service reported that it had 1,548 beds available for sick and wounded American veterans. The number of veterans diagnosed with mental illness and tuberculosis alone exceeded 74,500, and another 120,000 were recovering from wounds and illnesses in Europe.
