"Our generation . . . we are a group of individuals that are asking for that type of outside environment. We're trying to, especially here in Ohio, push away from the stigma of the canteen. We want the outdoor. We want the ability to get on our phones, get on social media and have this presence where we're out there in the limelight, in the community, being seen and . . . having that out there front and center. That's what this type of youth movement and the younger generation is looking for."
