BE THE ONE

"We are changing lives, and we are saving lives."

2023-2024 American Legion National Commander Daniel J. Seehafer

The American Legion's primary mission – to reduce the number of veterans lost to suicide – gained momentum on several fronts in 2023:

- Across the nation, American Legion posts joined forces with other community partners to raise awareness, promote resources in their areas and destigmatize asking for help. Some posts organized 5Ks, walks or hikes, or hosted resource fairs. Other posts distributed information during high-profile events like NBA games.
- The Legion's INDYCAR partnership led to greater external awareness and opened the doors to more opportunities to engage influencers. The presence of the Be the One mobile activation unit at various races helped generate interest in the Legion's mission and deliver potentially life-saving information and educational materials to veterans and their families.
- At the first Be the One symposium, held during the Legion's 2023 National Convention in Charlotte, N.C., speakers shared stories of resilience, offered perspectives on different therapies for PTSD and other mental-health conditions, and introduced resources to those in attendance.

legion.org/betheone

In 2024, The American Legion kicked off virtual and in-person suicide prevention training. Partnering with Columbia University, the Legion is offering the free 90-minute sessions to Legion Family members so they know how to evaluate and proceed with a veteran who may be showing signs of hurting themselves. Find the schedule at legion.org/betheone/resources.

BUDDY CHECKS

More than 1 million veterans have been reached by American Legion Family members since the Buddy Check program launched in 2019. Through phone calls, texts, emails, letters, cards and face-to-face meetings, Buddy Checks let veterans and their families know somebody cares. The Legion has a national resolution calling for Buddy Checks to be conducted in the weeks leading up to Veterans Day and the organization's birthday in March, but posts are encouraged to conduct them year-round. VA's National Buddy Check Week, introduced in 2023, is modeled after the Legion program.

*"We all like to know that somebody's thinking about us.
We want to know somebody cares."*

Craig Annis, service officer for Ahwatukee Post 64 in Phoenix

The 2023 NTT INDYCAR SERIES was magical for The American Legion, Chip Ganassi Racing (CGR) and Alex Palou, who won his second series championship driving the No. 10 American Legion Be the One Honda.

In one of the most dominant seasons in recent INDYCAR history, Palou clinched the championship after winning the BITNILE.COM Grand Prix of Portland on Sept. 3 - the first time since 2007 a driver has clinched the series title with one race remaining.

In addition to Palou's achievements, fellow CGR drivers Marcus Ericsson and Marcus Armstrong also enjoyed success while carrying American Legion branding on their liveries during the season. Armstrong earned the series' Rookie of the Year honor despite competing only on street and road courses. And Ericsson finished sixth in the points race, including a second-place showing in the Indianapolis 500. In the INDY NXT SERIES, developmental driver Kyffin Simpson - also carrying Legion branding - ended up 10th in series point standings.

"It's not your normal sponsorship where you have a product we're trying to sell. It's a program that touches people, and touches so many honorable people."

RECORD-SETTING 2023:

- 5 wins
- 2 pole awards
- 13 top 5 finishes
- 17 top 10 finishes
- 1 series championship

CLAIMS SUPPORT

"I don't know how to say it. It's changed our life."

Evelyn Ent, speaking about the successful work of American Legion national claims representatives who helped her husband receive previously denied VA compensation for conditions related to his Agent Orange exposure during the Vietnam War

Accredited American Legion service officers and staff appeals representatives work more than 1 million disability claims cases a year. In 2023, the Legion’s team of more than 3,000 service officers across the country obtained $18.8 billion in VA benefits for disabled veterans and their families. Staff representatives who work from American Legion National Headquarters offices in Washington, D.C., and Indianapolis helped 13,187 veterans receive previously denied benefits through the appeals process. The PACT Act of 2022 has increased demand for Legion service officers and appeals representatives, who are now working a historically high volume of claims.

Disability Benefits Received Through American Legion Service Officers

2020	$14.5 billion

Task Force Movement debuted in April 2022 to connect the dots between industry, government, the military, VA, educational and training institutions, and veterans service organizations to fill needed gaps in the economy. The labor shortage emerged as a major problem during the COVID-19 pandemic, when manufacturing and supply chains were severely strained. The American Legion has a seat on the Task Force Movement Steering Committee, which works primarily to accelerate career placement for veterans and their spouses in industries in need, including trucking, cybersecurity and health care.

“We have 2 million health-care professionals we are short now, across America. Many of those are nurses, but we know health care today is not episodic ... Health care is every single day - what you eat, how you exercise, sleeping well, those types of things.”

Patrick Murphy, chairman of Task Force Movement, which in 2023 added the health-care industry to its areas of focus to fast-track credentialing and placement of veterans into areas of need in the U.S. economy

GI BILL BENEFITS

"These upgrades will make the GI Bill more efficient and modern than it has ever been."

VA Secretary Denis McDonough, discussing the Digital GI Bill project during the Student Veterans of America National Conference in January 2024

In March 2021, the Department of Veterans Affairs began consolidating GI Bill capabilities into a single digital program in an effort to streamline the process for servicemembers, veterans and their families. Beneficiaries can now simply send text messages to verify they are attending classes. Claims processing will be more accurate and efficient, with improved compliance and oversight.

In coming years, VA will continue to modernize and streamline the GI Bill process. And The American Legion will be there to encourage further development of the benefit, as it has been since its adoption in 1944.

$410 billion+

Amount in education benefits VA has provided since 1944, to more than 25 million veterans and their families

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

For decades, The American Legion has teamed with other organizations, agencies and the private sector to bring employment opportunities to veterans, servicemembers and spouses. That continued in 2023-2024, at every level of the organization.

Carlisle-Bennet Post 13 in Albuquerque, N.M., hosted its eighth annual Heroes Hiring Heroes employment fair in April, in conjunction with the New Mexico Workforce Connection. The event brought dozens of employees and community resources together with active-duty servicemembers, veterans, military spouses and other job seekers.

The American Legion Department of Puerto Rico hosted a career and resources fair for veterans, dependents of active servicemembers, reserve and National Guard members that drew more than 40 employers and approximately 70 job seekers in October. The event connected the department and SkillMil, the Department of Labor and Human Resources, the Fort Buchanan Transition Office and the Municipality of Carolina.

And the American Legion Department of New Jersey coordinated three job fairs in 2023 that drew more than 190 veterans. Included in the effort was a dedicated event to fill openings in the casino business.

“Veterans bring the inherent values they learned from their military service. We can apply those in exactly what we do.”

THE MILITARY RECRUITING CRISIS

The U.S. military is facing the toughest recruiting environment since the creation of the all-volunteer force 50 years ago.

Nationwide, 77% of youth 17 to 24 are ineligible to serve, failing to meet physical and academic-entry standards. The number of those with a propensity to serve has shrunk to 9%. Meanwhile, according to a 2023 Blue Star Families survey, active-duty families are becoming less likely to recommend service to their children, citing spouse employment, housing costs and conditions, low pay and extended time away from home as top concerns.

In testimony to Congress, senior members of the service branches said their greatest challenge is a growing disconnect between the military and the public. This is where The American Legion can make a difference. By talking in their communities about the benefits of service, and sharing how their time in uniform changed their lives for the better, veterans offer living proof that the military is not just a viable career choice after high school, but a pathway to personal and professional success.

Shortfall in new recruits across the various branches of the U.S. military in fiscal 2023

"We have 23% that qualify, and everybody wants that 23%. We're in this war for talent. I ask your help to tell (young people) the power of service. It opens up so many doors."

Maj. Gen. Johnny Davis, commanding general of U.S. Army Recruiting Command and Fort Knox, Ky.

HOW LEGION POSTS CAN HELP

- BUILD STRONGER TIES WITH LOCAL MILITARY LEADERSHIP, BASES AND RECRUITING STATIONS
- HOST COMMUNITY EVENTS THAT GIVE YOUTH THE OPPORTUNITY TO ENGAGE WITH VETERANS
- DEVELOP RELATIONSHIPS WITH LOCAL HIGH SCHOOLS, ESPECIALLY THOSE WITH JROTC UNITS

BASE PROGRAM

American Legion volunteers and staff took a critical step forward to improve the lives of servicemembers and their families during the initial Base Assessment and Servicemember Experience (BASE) program visit in 2023.

The team visited Arizona's Marine Corps Air Station Yuma in October, where they conducted a town hall, met with base leadership, toured the facilities, and acquired additional information that will be used in a report aimed at helping to create improvements at Yuma and elsewhere.

The Legion created the BASE program in 2022 to address quality-of-life matters that affect servicemembers and their families. Future visits are planned for other bases in 2024 and beyond.

“Give us the data points, best practices and questions you want so we can make sure these reports are effective.”

American Legion National Security Commission Chairman Matthew Shuman, a member of Sipe-Peterson Post 44 in Scottsdale, Ariz., during the first BASE visit

LEGISLATIVE ACTION

At its core, The American Legion has always been a grassroots organization. The support of members is critical to advocate on behalf of all veterans in the halls of Congress. The Legion maintains a fast, convenient digital conduit to the nation's capital: the Grassroots Action Center, which allows members to send targeted messages to their elected officials in Washington.

A partial list of active American Legion legislative campaigns includes ensuring payment for Coast Guard members during government shutdowns, expanding national cemeteries, the Elizabeth Dole Home Care Act, the GUARD Act and the Afghan Adjustment Act.

BLOOD DONATIONS

Since its creation in 1942, the American Legion Blood Donor Program has been an integral part of the Legion's support for communities. Over the years, The American Legion has become the nation's top organizational donor of blood for the Red Cross.

Part of that legacy is the Legion's annual Holiday Blood Donor Drive, during which time American Legion Family members are encouraged to give blood and host blood drives.

Blood donation is critical year-round, though, and Legion posts and programs do their part to keep the nation's blood supply from falling into dangerous shortage.

"I always give blood. I worked in the medical field for 22 years, and I know how one pint of blood could save three lives."

YOUTH PROGRAMS

“The oratorical contest gives you the ability to articulate ideas about the Constitution and your country, and also the communication skills to connect with people.”

Haley Bock, winner of the 2023 American Legion National Oratorical Contest

For the past 26 years, the American Legion National Oratorical Contest has been held in Indianapolis, home to American Legion National Headquarters. But in 2024, the Legion received an opportunity to relocate the 86-year-old program to the historic campus of Hillsdale College in Michigan, providing youth an even more exceptional program experience and elevating national awareness of the competition. Moving forward, the 50-plus high school department oratorical winners will speak on the U.S. Constitution and compete for more than $203,000 in scholarships at Hillsdale.

The opportunity opened the door for another American Legion youth program to be held at Hillsdale starting in 2024: the Junior 3-Position Air Rifle National Championships.

FLAG SUPPORT

As the symbol of our nation and the freedoms millions have fought and died to preserve, the U.S. flag is worthy of protection. The American Legion continues to champion a constitutional amendment that would restore Congress' authority to prohibit desecration of the flag, as well as modernization of the U.S. Flag Code.

Yet the Legion recognizes that respect for Old Glory begins in our cities, towns, schools and homes. Through community Flag Day events, flag etiquette lessons for youth, and the collection and disposal of worn and tattered flags, American Legion posts are teaching the next generation reverence for the nation's colors.

Locally and nationally, the Legion is a leading authority on the U.S. flag. To that end, legion.org/flag is a resource hub for members, offering videos, Q&As, "Rally Around the Flag" social media graphics, and publications to promote proper flag care and display.

Kyeler Thompson scored the lone run in League City's 1-0 win over Lincoln (Neb.) Post 3 in the championship game of the 96th ALWS, on Aug. 15, 2023, in Shelby, N.C. Two months later, team members were special guests at Game 2 of the Major League Baseball World Series in Arlington, Texas. The Texas Rangers won their first World Series title, led by series MVP Corey Seager, a former Legion Baseball player for Post 115 in Kannapolis, N.C. Seager was also named the 2023 American Legion Baseball Graduate of the Year.

TANGO ALPHA LIMA

The American Legion's award-winning weekly podcast has recorded impressive growth, setting new benchmarks for monthly and annual totals for downloads. As the audience reach grew, so too did the range of content. In September, the podcast published a special six-part series on military sexual trauma, focusing on educating, raising awareness and offering stories of hope through the lens of survivors. Also in September, the monthly Be the One podcast launched, as a way to elevate the conversation about veteran suicide through this medium.

legion.org/tangoalphalima

“As The American Legion strives to connect with the youngest generation of veterans and servicemembers, the podcast has built a bridge to those brothers and sisters of ours. Perhaps best of all, the podcast is resonating not only with younger members but our more traditional members as well.”

Media & Communications Commission Chairman Dave Wallace, a member of Dyer-Gunnell Post 180 in Vienna, Va.

GLOBAL WAR ON TERRORISM MEMORIAL

The nation's memorial to the 20-year Global War on Terrorism and those who fought it is moving toward final approval and construction, with a dedication on the National Mall in Washington, D.C., planned for 2027. The memorial is intended as a testament to a long, complicated conflict - and most of all, to the war's veterans and their families - and is supported by a national American Legion resolution.

The American Legion has strongly supported and advocated for the construction of national war memorials on the Mall throughout the organization's 105-year history: World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam and the Vietnam Women's Memorial. Footprints and designs vary, but the Legion's commitment to honor and remember the fallen does not.

AMERICAN LEGION MEMBERSHIP

Legionnaires who had taken advantage of the new multiyear membership option as of April 25, 2024

136,633

Legionnaires who had auto-renewed their membership as of April 25, 2024

After careful study, the American Legion Membership Ad Hoc Committee recently recommended a change to the traditional structure of membership in the organization. New and existing members can now renew and pay online for not just one but three years at a time, as well as automatically renew their memberships. This “set-and-forget” format frees Legionnaires to focus on participation and leadership in the organization’s programs and priorities, and saves the Legion money on the printing and distribution of renewal notices.

This change is just one example of The American Legion adapting to best serve veterans, their families and the nation in the 21st century, from just-in-time on-demand printing of brochures and booklets to mobile apps and podcasts.

VETERANS & CHILDREN FOUNDATION

In 2019, the American Legion Endowment Fund - which had assisted millions of veterans, their families and children in need since 1925 - began doing business as the American Legion Veterans & Children Foundation (VCF). It directly funds:

- Necessary training for American Legion-accredited service officers who provide free assistance to veterans applying for disability benefits they earned through their service
- Temporary Financial Assistance grants that help active-duty military and veteran families with children in need

VCF relies entirely on charitable donations from individuals, like-minded associations and corporate allies. It now stands as the primary fundraising mission of the American Legion Riders, whose annual Legacy Run has raised nearly $20 million for the American Legion Legacy Scholarship Fund. With that fund now able to sustain itself through the foreseeable future, the Legacy Run now focuses on raising funds for VCF.

The American Legion began 2023 with eight corporate partnerships, and by the end of the year had expanded that to 18. The Legion uses the generous support of corporations - through sponsorships, cause-marketing initiatives, and in-kind and philanthropic donations - to further its work for veterans, communities and the nation.

Via the organization's sponsorship in INDYCAR, a relationship with Centene and its subsidiary Wellcare grew into an $8 million, five-year partnership that includes national- and post-level investments.

In 2023, USAA renewed its 13-year-old American Legion partnership for over $12 million over five years. The USAA Face the Fight suicide-prevention initiative worked with The American Legion to donate BeaverFit "container gym" equipment to Legion posts in three states.

And licensing agreements with member discount partners came to life in 2023. Expressoul Be The One Coffee, for example, is available for purchase.

AMERICAN LEGION FAMILY

The Sons of The American Legion bounced back from the COVID-19 pandemic in a big way, closing out 2023 with 380,743 members – a new record high. While the raw membership numbers show the strength of the Sons and the American Legion Family, it's their generosity in time and money that really tells the organizations' story.

Members of the Sons, American Legion Auxiliary and Legion Riders volunteer millions of hours a year at VA medical centers and conduct American Legion youth programs at the national, state and local levels. Meanwhile, American Legion Family fundraising efforts and donations support servicemembers, veterans and their families through a variety of charities, including the Veterans & Children Foundation, Child Welfare Foundation, National Emergency Fund, Operation Comfort Warriors, American Legion Auxiliary Foundation and more.

Through community service projects at national conventions, meetings and in their hometowns from coast to coast, members of the American Legion Family demonstrate their love of country and gratitude for those who defend it.

STATUES OF LIBERATION

The American Legion's sacred duty to "preserve the memories and incidents of our associations in all wars" has reached a crescendo in Normandy, France, over the past three years. In 2022, then-National Commander Paul A. Dillard unveiled a Statue of Liberation in Ste. Mère-Église, first French town liberated by the Allies of World War II on D-Day, of Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., founding leader of The American Legion. In 2023, then-National Commander Vincent J. "Jim" Troiola officially dedicated the monument in a ceremony attended by U.S. and international dignitaries, including then-Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Mark Milley. Added for the 80th anniversary is a second and final statue, depicting Europe Supreme Allied Commander Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.
